SPECIAL EVENT ADDED TO 2003/04 SEASON!

RENOWNED MEZZO-SOPRANO
CECILIA BARTOLI
RETURNS TO CAL PERFORMANCES FEBRUARY 15, 2004

BERKELEY, July 8, 2003 – Italian mezzo-soprano Cecilia Bartoli, who made her West Coast debut at Cal Performances in 1991, returns to Zellerbach Hall to perform in recital Sunday, February 15 at 3:00 p.m. Bartoli's last appearance in the Bay Area was February 2001's sold-out performance at Zellerbach Hall with the early music ensemble Il Giardino Armonico in a program of music by Antonio Vivaldi. The San Francisco Chronicle called that appearance "a genuine triumph, the result of lustrous vocalism, fascinating programming...and an ebullient rapport with the audience...rarely has Bartoli's voice sounded so expansive and full of color, or her phrasing so fluid and eloquent." Recently honored at the 2003 Classical Brit Awards for her outstanding contribution to music, the revered mezzo-soprano is enjoying a host of international honors due to her back-to-back Grammy-winning recordings of newly-discovered operatic works by Vivaldi and Gluck. Piano accompaniment and repertoire for Ms. Bartoli's February 15 recital at Cal Performances will be announced.

In addition to Berkeley, Ms. Bartoli's 2004 North American tour engagements include performances at the Los Angeles Opera, La Jolla Chamber Music Society, Chicago Symphony Orchestra, University Musical Society (Ann Arbor, Michigan), the Kennedy Center, Carnegie Hall, and the Flint Celebrity Series (Boston).

CECILIA BARTOLI

Although she had performed at Milan's La Scala opera house and on French and Italian television, attracting immediate attention from some of the world's great conductors and musicians, Bartoli was not well known in the United States when she performed her first West Coast concert in February 1991 in Hertz Hall for Cal Performances. At the intermission of her first concert here, Cal Performances Director Robert Cole engaged her to return the following season. As her career blossomed, Bartoli has maintained a close relationship with Berkeley and has made subsequent recital appearances in February 1992, January 1993, March 1994, a concert in Zellerbach Hall with San Francisco Opera orchestra members in February 1995, and most recently the 2001 appearance with Il Giardino Armonico.

Cecilia Bartoli was born in Rome to musical parents, (both were professional singers), where she attended the Conservatorio di Santa Cecilia. Her obvious vocal talents drew the attention of conductors Herbert von Karajan and Daniel Barenboim after an early appearance on French television. Fame swiftly followed. She is best known for her roles in numerous Mozart and Rossini operas, including appearances at La Scala, Salzburg and Zurich in Don Giovanni (as Zerlina and Donna Elvira); in Florence, Vienna and New York in Così fan Tutte (as Dorabella and Despina); in New York and Zurich in Nozze di Figaro (as Cherubino and Susanna); and in the Met's first staging of La Cenerentola. October 2001 saw the mezzo-soprano's long-awaited debut at the Royal Opera House Covent Garden in Haydn's L'Anima del Filosofo. In 2001/02 she performed in Toulouse, Paris, Baden-Baden, Amsterdam, Munich and Bremen with the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment and Le Musiche Nov. In March 2002 Bartoli performed a revival of Paisello's Nina and a new production of Rossini's Il Turco in Italia at the Zurich Opera House.

Bartoli has recorded more than 10 complete operas, most recently Haydn's Armida and Handel's Renaldo, in addition to numerous solo albums, including three CDs of Rossini arias and songs; two Mozart aria CDs; an album of French songs; and a CD of Mozart, Rossini and Donizetti duets with bass-baritone Bryn Terfel. Bartoli's 1999 Vivaldi Album has sold a staggering 500,000-plus copies worldwide, an unprecedented accomplishment for a recording of unknown classical repertoire. Dreams and Fables: Gluck Italian Arias (2001), a survey of the little-known early Italian arias of Christoph Willibald von Gluck, was another bestseller and Grammy Award- winner. The Art of Cecilia Bartoli, released on Decca last fall, demonstrates the multiple facets of her superb vocal instrument, and features duets with Bryn Terfel, David Daniels and Luciano Pavarotti.

Due for release on September 30, 2003 is The Salieri Album (Decca). “The aim of the recording, which is based totally on Salieri’s own manuscripts, is to give full recognition to a composer whose vast creativity led to the most vivid portrayal of human emotion in music,” Bartoli writes of this new recording. Accompanied by the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment and conductor Adam Fischer, Bartoli celebrates Salieri’s enormous emotional range from delicate melodies reminiscent of Mozart to explosively expressive compositions, all performed with Bartoli’s unrivalled technical brilliance and commitment.

In addition to winning Grammys for the Vivaldi and Gluck recordings, Bartoli is also the recipient of two Grammy Awards for Best Classical Vocal Album—for her Italian Songs CD with Andras Schiff and An Italian Songbook with James Levine. She has been honored with multiple awards including the Deutsche Schallplatten Preis, La Stella d’Oro, the Diapason d’Or and the Chevalier of Arts and Letters from the French government.
